

Plays for the Coming Week

RENE FENWICK will be brought out as a star at the Booth Theatre on Monday night in "The Co-Respondent," a comedy drama by Alice Leal Pollock and Rita Welman. In the supporting cast will be Norman Trevor, Harrison Hunter, Marie Chambers, W. L. Gibson, H. H. Sleight, Suzanne Willa, Winifred Harris and Harry Hadfield.

"The Midnight Revel," a miniature revue, will be added to the skating exhibition at Castles in the Air and Ice Palace on Thursday night. The music is by Harry Carroll and the lyrics have been supplied by Ballard MacDonald. In addition to twenty girls who appear in the musical numbers there will be O'Brien and Harris and the International Dancers.

Several one-act plays will be included in the entertainment in aid of destitute Hungarian children at the Lyric Theatre on Tuesday afternoon. Katherine Kidder will be seen in "The Washerwoman Duchess." Among others who will appear are Mrs. Fiske, Viola Allen, Henrietta Crosman and Brandon Tynan.

Matinee performances of the musical extravaganza "Peter Rabbit in Dreamland," for the benefit of Flushing and Sydenham Hospitals, will be given at the Century Theatre on April 17, 18, 19, 20 and 22. Over 300 performers will appear in the production. One feature will be a parade of 125 pretty girls, wearing frocks showing the latest styles from Paris for the summer of 1916.

"The Melody of Youth" moves to the Criterion Theatre.

Louis Mann in "The Bubble," beginning an engagement at Maxine Elliott's Theatre on Monday evening. "British and Perlmutter in Society" will be the attraction at the Standard Theatre.

Daly's will have "The Twentieth Century Widows."

For its attraction the Yorkville Theatre will have "Dixon's Revue of 1916."

"Along Came Ruth" will be presented by the stock company at the Grand Opera House, Brooklyn.

'20TH CENTURY MAIDS' COME TO THE COLUMBIA.

"The Twentieth Century Maids" will present a new two-act burlesque and vaudeville specialties at the Columbia Theatre. A special feature of the performance is a pantomime called "The Apache," which shows the abduction of a French girl and the life she is forced to lead in the underworld of Paris. The maid investigates the efforts of the police to discover the whereabouts of the girl and punish the members of the gang. In the cast are Harry Cooper, Jim Barton, Frank Leonard, Irene Cheshire, Arthur Young, Julia De Keely, Edward Hastings, Mae West, Eddie Roberts and Jack Leslie. Many musical numbers are introduced by a large chorus of girls, and the Vaudeville features include the Old Town Four, who render popular songs, and the Cheshire Sisters, singers and dancers. Harry Cooper, the German comedian, assists by twelve show girls, presented in a funny bit called "Follow Me, Girls," and Jim Barton gives the "Midnight Cakewalk Ball" with the aid of the chorus.

"RAMONA" A PHOTO PLAY OF VARIETY AND CHARM.

"Ramona," Clune's cinema-drama at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, is an unusual combination of pictures, real actors and music.

For the first time Helen Hunt Jackson's famous novel has been successfully put into dramatic form—one cannot succeed such a problem without losing pictures—and the millions of people who have read and loved the romance will enjoy it in its new form. It embodies all the naturalness and charm, the simplicity and pathos of the lives of the people of California of old. The arrangement of the despoiling of the Mission Indians is particularly forceful in the play than in the book.

The realism is softened by the poetic treatment of the theme and the beauty of the scenes. Mrs. Jackson's book was followed faithfully and the millions of people who have read and loved the romance will enjoy it in its new form. It embodies all the naturalness and charm, the simplicity and pathos of the lives of the people of California of old. The arrangement of the despoiling of the Mission Indians is particularly forceful in the play than in the book.

The Fox press agent says when Virginia Suratt's new gowns are seen on the screen they'll "knock your eye out."

In the Mutual masterpiece, "The Leopard's Bride," Margaret Gibson is attacked by leopards and "almost killed."

Oscar Crane has been engaged by the Faillie and is making his first picture. He has leased a studio and a ladder and brings her shoulder. She should take a few lessons from Charlie Chaplin.

The first showing of the new Marquette Snow picture, "The Half Million Bride," will take place at the Lexington Theatre, Sunday, April 16.

William Farnum, starring the Fox film, "The Battle of Hearts," is a great fisherman and often baita hook. Just thought you might like to know.

Robert Hastings Goodman has sold to the World Film Corporation a five-reel version of "Romeo and Juliet;" Cliff Kinnar Young will be seen in it for the first time.

Mary Moore is playing in "A Million Minutes," with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne.
